MEMORANDUM

TO: HONORABLE MAYOR & CITY COUNCIL

SUBJECT: City Administrator's Weekly Report DATE: April 11, 2014

INFORMATION

Following are the key activities to be highlighted this week:

Oaklanders Show Support For A Public Safety Measure That Reduces Gun Violence, Supports At-Risk Youth – On Wednesday, April 9, the City of Oakland announced efforts to renew a special tax for public safety (known as Measure Y) in consultation with community organizations like Oakland Community Organizations (OCO) and Make Oakland Better Now (MOBN). This renewal would extend funding but change the policy framework of the measure to focus on proven crime reduction strategies. Voter research commissioned by the City – with the input of community groups – indicates that voters support the idea of a renewal of the parcel tax with no increase in rate. Voters also indicated support for the key elements of this targeted measure: reduction of gun violence and support for at-risk youth. To view a summary of poll results, please visit http://www2.oaklandnet.com/w/OAK046498. To read the media release, please visit http://www2.oaklandnet.com/w/OAK046525.

Oakland Unite Street Outreach Worker Training – From Tuesday, April 1 to Thursday, April 3, Oakland Unite hosted a three-day training for Oakland Unite Street Outreach Workers. The street outreach workers were trained on best practices for street outreach, stress management and public speaking. They also had the opportunity to strengthen their collaboration with the Crisis Response Support Network and Reentry Employment providers funded by Oakland Unite. The training included presentations about Oakland Unite programs and Ceasefire as part of the City of Oakland's overall violence prevention efforts. The training highlighted important evaluation information for Oakland Unite Street Outreach Workers that shows that 85% of participants touched by outreach programs did not get rearrested for violence. Josie Halpern-Finnerty, Oakland Unite Program Planner, and Kevin Grant, Oakland Unite Violence Prevention Network Coordinator, were instrumental in coordinating and running the training and for its great success. Thank you to all City of Oakland staff and community agencies and partners who were able to attend the training and support the Oakland Unite Street Outreach Workers. For more information, please contact Josie Halpern-Finnerty, Program Planner, at jhalpern-finnerty@oaklandnet.com or (510) 238-2350.

OPD Command Staff At Public Safety Meeting – On Tuesday, April 8, Interim Chief Sean Whent and the Oakland Police Department's five area commanders spoke at the Oakland City Council Public Safety Committee meeting held at Oakland Tech High School. In an overview, the chief stated that year-to-date, Part 1 crimes (murder, assault with a firearm, sexual assault, robbery and burglary) are down 15% compared to last year. Most significantly, non-fatal shootings are down 31% and robberies are down 36%. Area commanders reported on crime trends in their areas and how they are being addressed. OPD continues to focus on reducing crime and partnering with neighborhood groups to increase public safety. For more information, please contact Sgt. Holly Joshi, OPD Chief of Staff, at https://documents.com or (510) 238-3131.

Two-Day Tech Startup Competition & Conference Shines Spotlight On Oakland's Emerging Role As Tech Hub – On Tuesday, May 6 and Wednesday, May 7, the Vator Splash conference promises to shine a spotlight on Oakland's increasing attraction as a tech hub. As many as 1,000 attendees are anticipated to attend presentations, panels and "fireside chats" at the Jack London Market building at 55 Harrison Street in Jack London Square. Participants will follow two tracks of content designed to educate startup tech entrepreneurs as well as venture capital (VC) and angel investors. Speakers include luminaries in the venture capital world as well as civic and business leaders who will talk about how to start and scale successful companies and trends that are shaping future tech investment. The extensive speaker slate includes Mitch Kapor, founder of Lotus Corporation and Kapor Center for Social Impact; Sungevity co-founder Danny Kennedy; Blue Bottle Coffee founder & CEO James Freeman and Brian Wong, of Kiip. Wong, at 18, is the youngest CEO to receive venture funding. Among many venture capital leaders speaking or leading workshops are Tim Draper, DFJ founder; Sharon Wienbar of ScaleVenture Partners; Jeff Clavier of SoftTechVC; Tony Conrad, founder of True Ventures and Jed Katz, founder of Javelin Venture Partners. The growing agenda and speaker list are available on the event website. Vator, the 6-year old online business publication and social network that produces the event, has held successful, smaller Splash events, in San Francisco, Los Angeles, New York and London. Vator's founder, award-winning journalist Bambi Francisco, picked Oakland quite intentionally as the launch pad for the inaugural two-day expanded conference. Another highlight of Vator Splash Oakland will be on-stage presentations from finalists in two, concurrent tech startup competitions that launched in January: the Vator Splash competition, open to any US-based tech startup, and the Oaktown Tech competition, sponsored by Oakland Forward, for Oakland and neighboring East Bay startups. Finalists must survive two rounds of judging, competing for recognition and an estimated $40,000 in in-kind services and sit down meetings with major VCs and angel investors. Past Vator Splash competition participants have gone on to receive upward of $140 million in follow-on funding. To qualify for the competition, startups must be under 3 years old and have under $2 million in outside funding. The City of Oakland is among the growing list of major sponsors for the event. Now in its fifth year, the daylong event attracted more than 2,000 children and their families to Fairyland, where they enjoyed a free day in the park and engaged in read-alouds, puppet shows, interactive workshops, multicultural performances and activities geared toward increasing children's literacy. Oakland Head Start/Early Head Start's vision is to increase awareness of available resources to maximize early literacy outcomes and opportunities for Oakland's most vulnerable children and is looking to partner with community based organization's that support this vision. Telegraph Avenue Complete Streets Plan Progress – In late April and early May, the Oakland Public Works Department will host free open houses on the Telegraph Avenue Complete Streets

Plan. Telegraph Avenue from 20th to 57th streets is undergoing a joint City and community planning effort. Complete Streets could include blub outs, bike lanes and improved pedestrian crossings. Thanks to the over 1,100 survey respondents, the City of Oakland now has a much richer understanding of community concerns and desires that will inform the development of design options. To view the results of the online survey, please visit the Telegraph Avenue Complete Streets website at www.oaklandnet.com/TelegraphAvenue. To view the summary report for the survey, please visit http://www2.oaklandnet.com/w/OAK046218. Three public open houses will be held to solicit feedback on the initial options. Each open house will cover the same material. In planning the open houses, City staff wanted to offer a range of times and locations to provide an opportunity for everyone to participate. The project team will be working hard over the next few weeks to translate what they learned from the technical analysis, stakeholder meetings and the public survey into specific design concepts for the open houses. Open houses are scheduled for:
